Highlights from the February Issue of the UOG Journal

The February issue of Ultrasound in Obstetrics & Gynecology has a special focus on twin pregnancy, including a series of papers on the management of monoamniotic twin pregnancy, with an accompanying Editorial addressing pitfalls in this area of research. Also included in this issue are studies on two-dimensional ultrasound for postmortem examination, the cost-effectiveness of first-trimester screening and early aspirin initiation for early-onset pre-eclampsia, and the association between pelvic floor muscle trauma and contraction in parous women.

Keep reading the newsletter for a message from UOG Editor-in-Chief Tony Odibo!

Also out this month is a new Virtual Issue on twin pregnancy, containing a selection of relevant articles from UOG.

Coming up in next month's issue is a series of papers reporting on the management of prenatally diagnosed spina bifida - take another look at our related video.

A message from UOG Editor-in-Chief, Prof. Anthony Odibo

I'm delighted to share with you the record-breaking success of our latest video abstract on fundal pressure during the second stage of labor, which has caught the attention of over 60,000 Facebook users. Video abstracts are a recent addition to the Journal's content, aimed at widening dissemination of high-quality research through social media. Aly Youssef, our Social Media Editor, tells us more about the importance and potential of this in his article in the latest issue of UOG.

This month's issue, accompanied by an online Virtual Issue, has a special focus on twin pregnancy, timed to supplement ISUOG's next course on the same topic. Next month, we'll be sharing some of the latest research on management of pregnancies affected by fetal meningomyelocele. To warm you up, take another look at our video of fetoscopic repair of spina bifida to see how some pioneers are tackling this condition in utero.

With Journal membership of ISUOG, you can enjoy access to leading clinically impactful research in obstetrics and gynecology, as well as Journal Clubs, journal highlights, virtual issues and guidelines, at the comfort of your desk or on-the-go by using the UOG app. As always, I and my fellow editors welcome your thoughts on how we can make UOG the go-to journal in its field.

Help us send you information specific to your interests! Log in and go to 'My ISUOG' to update details such as your specialty, so we can send you the most specific content. Please also make sure your other details are up to date.
